House Republicans set to push through $31.52 billion budget this week
House Republicans Monday unveiled a budget plan they intend to send to the Senate this week with a final spending number ringing in at $31.52 billion, a number more than $800 million below what Gov. Tom Wolf proposed in February and just under $250 million shy of the current year’s spend number.

Sen. Dinniman discusses assessments
Now that federal law has changed, education assessments in Pennsylvania’s public schools will likely be overhauled as well. Lawmakers have argued at recent hearings that Pennsylvania is spending too much money and schools are spending too much time on testing.

The PLS Reporter interviewed Sen. Andrew Dinniman (D-Chester), Minority Chairman of the Senate Education Committee, for his thoughts on the issue.

Monday's press conferences revolve around National Crime Victims' Rights Week
A press conference on Monday was held to support and raise awareness about crime victims’ rights.

At a later press conference, Rep. Mark Rozzi (D-Berks), led a rally on the Capitol steps to bring to light the need for changes in Pennsylvania’s laws that affect the victims of childhood sexual abuse.
